

ABILITY CHECK CHEAT SHEET

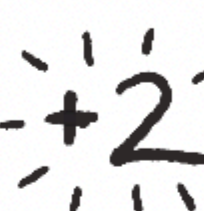

ABILITY CHECKS

... an ability Check represents a creature using a talent and training to try to overcome a challenge. The DM or other rules often call for an ability check.

... a saving throw represents an attempt to evade or resist a threat. If you don't want to resist the effect, you can choose to fail the save without rolling.

... the ability modifier is used for the called checks in different situations.

... a proficiency bonus is added if needed.

... the difficulty class represents the task's difficulty. The more difficult the task, the higher is the DC. The DM ultimately sets the DC. It can go from 5 (very easy) to 30 (nearly impossible).

Ability	Make A Check To...	Make A Save To...
Strength	Lift, push, pull, break something,...	Physically resist direct force
Dexterity	Move nimble, quickly or quietly	Dodge out of harm's way
Constitution	Push your body beyond limits	Endure a toxic hazard
Intelligence	Reason or remember	Recognize an illusion as fake
Wisdom	Notice things in the environment or in creatures' behavior	Resist a mental assault
Charisma	Influence, entertain, or deceive	Assert your identity

... if you roll a natural 1 the Check automatically fails regardless of any modifiers or the target's AC.

... if you roll a natural 20 the Check automatically succeeds regardless of any modifiers or the target's AC. This is also called a Critical Hit.

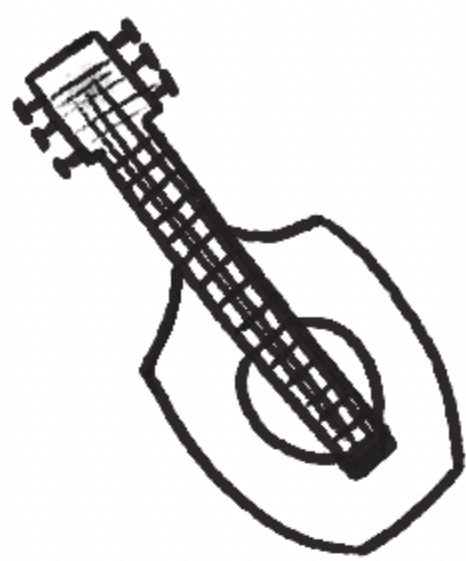

... you can have advantage or disadvantage on a Check. Advantage reflects the positive circumstances surrounding a d20 roll, while Disadvantage reflects negative circumstances. Either way you roll two D20. Use the higher roll if you have advantage and use the lower roll if you have disadvantage.

... you can reroll your dice if you have an inspiration at hand.

SKILL PROFICIENCIES

... Characters and Monsters are good at various things, so that is why everyone has a proficiency bonus in certain things. It reflects the impact training has on the creature's capabilities. This increases as the character gains levels.

... most ability checks involve a skill which resents a category of things creatures try to do with an ability check. The DM has the ultimate say on whether a skill is relevant in a situation.
